Abstract

Method and device for speech processing

A method for speech processing, in which an orthographic input is converted into a phonetic transcription in a first conversion step, and a step of checking and correcting the conversion result by the user is provided, having a second step of converting from the phonetic transcription into a pseudo-orthographic representation and outputting in this representation.